UNCLE RUBE'S FORETHOUGHT.

"Let's buy some new fixin's, Betsy. The ol' place is lookin' rather bare. This table's mighty simpsy, An' that old rockin' chair Is 'nuff to break my pore of back, An' it's worse my coat threadbare."

"Then thar's thet ol' musty sofy With the springs a-stickin' through, An' thet yeller-kivered bedstead Is so patched up with glue Thet I thought the pesky critter Was a-goin' to let me through."

"I've been thinkin' the matter over An' since the mortgage's paid, I've a gol-darned right good notion To go to town an' trade With Burkhardt down on Canal street, For Smith said it paid."

"He brought home a lot o' cheers An' a bran new Bed Room Suite, An' he thinks he was mighty cunnin' An' I guess a good deal cute; For he got 'em all for half the price He ought to have paid—the galoot."

"That's what we'll do, this very day. I'll harness the ol' red mare An' you put on your bunnet An' comb your stragglin' hair. The 'vertisements in the papers say 'Thet Burkhardt's cheapest an' squar'."

"We'll show ol' Bill an' his homely wife Thet we kin be dudes as well, An' hev our Furniture fixin's as nice As them, an' also be able to tell Thet we bought 'em of Burkhardt, The cheapest place this side of —."
